PROGRAM HIGHLIGHTS

ASU students taking this Study Abroad course will have the opportunity to observe classrooms and teach reading to children in Ghanaian schools under the theme: “Reading across Cultures.” They will interview teachers and administrators on instructional strategies and other issues facing teachers and education in Ghana. Students will then collect and compare data from their observations in Albany and Ghanaian schools and complete a research paper on their findings. Students taking Intercultural Communication will examine how culture informs and shapes communication and how to effectively communicate across cultural boundaries.
